REBEL FLAGS WHICH HAD TO BE HAULED DOWN.

Feud Among the Sugar Men—Judgement Against a City for Over Half a Million Dollars—Youthful Convicts Escape—Struggle With Death in a Coal Mine.

NEW YORK, June 20—A Sun's special from Reading, California, says: The disappearance of Mount Shasta's peak is still a subject of discussion. At the lower soda springs, some fifteen miles distant from the mountain, the water in the spring rose rapidly on Monday, overflowing the floor of the spring house. A party that arrived from Pittsville yesterday said that the mountain on the east side indicates considerable commotion. Large quantities of smoke and vapor are rising.

Sequel to an Opium Affair.

PORTLAND, June 18.—Dr. Lee Him, who was kidnapped by opium smugglers on May 27 because he wouldn't pay for a lot of opium which had been seized by customs officers, arrived home this evening looking fat and jolly. He says he escaped from the smugglers at Seattle without paying them and fled to Victoria, and was scared to come back for fear they would catch him again. He was well used and well fed, and says he wants nothing more to do with smugglers.

Still Hoping.

DUNBAR, Pa., June 20.—The progress made last night by the rescuing party has not been nearly so favorable as was hoped. The men are still working steadily but there has been a great deal of fallen wreck encountered. It was decided to attempt an entrance through another lead. It is barely possible that the men are still alive as the draft last night suddenly increased which can only be accounted for by either the fall of rock or the men digging to meet the rescuers.

Youthful Convicts Escape.

SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS, June 20.—A hunt is being made for six convicts who escaped from the state reform school at Huntsville on Tuesday. The youths who escaped are all under sentence for serious offences, and every effort is being made to effect their capture. Several guards and a pack of bloodhounds started in pursuit immediately on the discovery of the escape, but the convicts had a few hours start and while the hounds soon found the trail and kept it until late yesterday they became exhausted and another pack was secured and the chase was resumed. Up to this evening the fugitives had not been overtaken.

No Rebel Flags for Them.

STUBENVILLE, Ohio, June 20.—A riot was prevented on Wednesday at the small town of New Cumberland six miles above the city of West Virginia by the decisive action of the authorities. E. Robinson is the owner of a show boat which moves up and down the river giving exhibitions at small towns. The boat while moored at this village yesterday put among a lot of foreign flags the rebel flag. Inside of ten minutes the whole village had turned out. As the crowd was growing menacing the town authorities waited on the manager of the show and requested him to remove his flags. He flatly refused at first but after a long discussion, during which time crowd asking that the manager be brought out and beaten he consented and hauled the flags down, putting up small flags of the national colors.

In Court for 40 Years.

NEW ORLEANS, June 20.—Judge Billings in the United States Circuit Court yesterday overruled the exceptions to Master's report in the famous Gaines case and gave judgment for over half a million dollars against the city of New Orleans. The case is the celebrated one of Myra Clark Gaines against the city of New Orleans which has been in the courts constantly for the last forty years.

Vendetta Murder.

NEW ORLEANS, La., June 20.—Another vendetta murder was committed here last night, the victim being Camillo Vitrano, a Sicilian. Vitrano was playing cards in an Italian wine room when a rifle cut down so as to look like a pistol, was shoved through the window and fired within a few inches of his head. He fell over dead on the table being killed instantly with at least four fatal wounds. The men playing cards with Vitrano were locked up as likely to be implicated in the vendetta some way, but not a particle of evidence could be obtained. The affair is clouded in mystery. This is the second vendetta murder in the last few weeks.

The Fatal Coal Fire.

BUTTE, June 20.—At Whitehall this morning, Mrs. Hubber, a French lady, tried lighting a fire in a stove with coal oil with the usual result. The can exploded and the woman was terribly burned and died after five hours of great suffering. She leaves a husband and one child.

Criminals of Pretended Nerve.

ELKO, Nev., June 20.—Both Potts and his wife say they will go off to the gallows without flinching. The woman says this with a great deal of vehemence and with much profanity. Those about her are not as confident. One of the death watch says she is already terror-stricken and prophesies that she will be dragged shrieking to her death. The condemned man is quiet and professed to a minister, who visited him, to be resigned to his fate.

Race War.

ST. LOUIS, June 20.—There are prospects for serious complications and a bloody race war in South East Missouri. The white populace refuse to permit negroes to work on the construction of the St. Louis, Arkansas and Texas railway and have attacked several men and scattered the negroes. Receivers Purdice and Swanson were granted permission by the United States circuit court to-day to employ detectives and rangers to protect their men. This will precipitate hostilities. The railroad company will send 150 men to the scene of the trouble thoroughly armed and equipped.

Objected to Sunday Trade.

TACOMA, June 18.—The clerks employed in the retail clothing trade recently formed an association with the principal object of securing the closing of all clothing stores on Sunday and appointed T. Nash to have the Sunday law enforced. On Monday warrants were sworn out against L. Moses, J. E. Heilich, David Jordan and Abe Blask. They were heard before Justice Patrick this morning and fined $25 each and costs. The cases were all appealed to the superior court.

C. P. R. Branches.

AUGUSTA, Me., June 18.—The Canadian Pacific railroad will be in full possession of the New Brunswick system after July 1st. They have also leased the Great Southern railway from St. Stephen to St. John from Russell Sage who purchased it two years ago.

Governor Ferry Objected.

OLYMPIA, June 18.—A very large new map of the state of Washington was taken into Governor Ferry's office to-day. The governor was importuned to purchase one. He objected to the name of Mount Tacoma on the map and said it was a falsification of history and refused to purchase.

A Fine Steamer.

PORTLAND, June 18.—The handsome propeller Victorian, for the Union Pacific Sound division, was launched from Steffin's ship yard yesterday. The Victorian will be finished some time in September and will immediately be taken to the Sound, her future home. The vessel is the largest ever built in Portland. She is 230 feet long, forty wide and has great power. Captain Troup, the designer, and Steffin, the builder, aver that the Victorian will be the fastest and prettiest steamer of her class on the Sound. A force of men have been working on the vessel five months. She will be magnificently furnished and will be completed at great expense.

Ice for New York.

NEW YORK, June 20.—The Norwegian bark Nomen, Capt. Fons, arrived from Brevig, Sweden, to-day. She brought a large cargo of 786 tons of ice, and more is coming from the same place. Brevig, where the ice was harvested, is a little village where labor is cheap and the cost of harvesting is small. Freight rates are very low, as trade is not brisk from places like Brevig to this port, and shippers are glad to get hold of a full cargo of any sort. Ice will save them from coming over in ballast.

A CLEVER ATTEMPT.

SING SING, N.Y., June 20.—Charles Reese, a convict, made an attempt to escape from the state prison this evening. Reese was sentenced in Brooklyn, New York, on May 10th, 1889, to serve fifteen years for robbery and five years for assault, and occupied cell 105 in the school gallery with George Murphy, another convict. When the men were being locked up for the night and Keeper Jewell was counting the prisoners he saw two men apparently in the cell occupied by Reese and Murphy. One seemed to be standing with his back to the keeper in a stooping posture, with one foot on a chair, as if fixing his shoe. Keeper Jewell told the man to turn around, as the rules of the prison require all convicts to face the keepers when being locked up for the night. The figure did not move and Jewell made an investigation. He found that it was a dummy, and that the convict's outfit, including trousers, coat, vest and shoes, had been used to make it. The trousers and coat had been cleverly stuffed. Keeper Jewell promptly notified Deputy Warden Connaughton and a search for Reese was begun. He was finally found under a bench in the shoe shop. He was locked up in a dark cell. Murphy will also be placed in a dark cell to-morrow. Reese will forfeit three years, which would have been taken off his sentence for good behavior.

YELLOW FEVER.

The Dreaded Disease Appearing in British Honduras—The People Leaving.

NEW YORK, June 20.—Advices from Belize, British Honduras, of June 13th says: For a few months past the colony of British Honduras, as well as the neighboring republics have been under ban of a disease which, while said by some experts not to be yellow fever, is yet so terrible in its character as to kill off without exception everyone whom it attacks. There was great excitement and anxiety in Belize yesterday when it was seen that the steamer Augan which had arrived during the night from the south, was flying a yellow flag and was lying in the quarantine ground. Every one who can do so is leaving Honduras for England or the United States. New Orleans is closed tight as a drum against British and Spanish Honduras, and if an outbreak should occur on the Aguan there will be no way of getting out of the country except by the way of Mexico, which will mean a long, tedious and expensive trip. At Cayo, seventy-five miles north-west of Belize, it is reported that people are dying like sheep, and the worst part of it is that nobody knows what the disease is. European doctors call it yellow fever, but American medicos differ from them.

The only thing therefore, positively known is that in the course of five or six days it kills almost everybody whom it attacks, and the survivors are simply asking themselves, whose turn will come next.

A Case Against the Customs.

LE HOW, a Chinese actor, has brought suit against Inspector Young, of Her Majesty's customs, who he claims imprisoned him in his room at the customs house for two hours and extorted $50 for head tax from him unlawfully. The case will be heard in the Supreme Court on the 25th inst. before a special jury.

HOME AND FOREIGN.

MINISTER THOMPSON'S VISIT TO LONDON—THE OBJECT.

The International Prison Congress Sitting at St. Petersburg Adopt Strong Resolutions—School Children Take Up the Cause of Old Ireland—Miscellaneous.

DUBLIN, June 20.—The children attending the convent school in Tipperary refused to-day to enter the building unless the children of the constabulary were expelled. Five hundred children of nationalists then formed a procession and marched to the school house with banners, to request the removal of the obnoxious children. This demand being refused, they marched through the town till finally dispersed by the police.

Five Men Drowned.

TORONTO, June 18.—A washout was reported on the Canadian Pacific last night, thirty miles east of here. The engine, with five men dispatched to repair damages, coming suddenly upon the break, plunged into the creek and all were drowned. The men were John Wanless, bridge inspector; John Atlan, engineer; F. Oliver, fireman; and section men Lott and Moriarity.

Saloon Keepers Held Responsible.

ST. PETERSBURG, June 20.—The international prison congress which is in session in this city adopted resolutions declaring the first treaties between the nations general principle of extradition should be recognized and the agreement arrived at as to the nature of the cases deemed exceptions to the rule. Second international associations should be organized to assist the discharged prisoners and their families; thirdly, the action of charitable bodies, both public and private, should be brought into a general agreement; fourth, inebrity accompanied by disorderly conduct should be punishable and that sellers of alcohol should be responsible for crimes resulting from serving drunken men.

Will it Reform Them?

CRETE, June 20.—A few days ago a number of Christians ambushed and shot three Turkish soldiers and a Cretan Mussleman. A body of Mussleman in revenge killed a Christian and threatened further reprisals.

Stanley on the Recent Negotiations.

LONDON, June 20.—Henry M. Stanley in reply to an address presented to him at Berwick to-day took occasion to refer to the recently consummated negotiations between Great Britain and Germany in the African territorial affair. Stanley unqualifiedly glorified in the wisdom of Lord Stanley, which in its exercise has resulted in the addition of five hundred thousand miles to the British empire. Stanley says instead of being called upon to intone a doleful Jeremiad he could cheerfully sing a pæon of praise in honor not only of the happy outcome of the Anglo-German negotiations, but of the Premier who had made the result possible. Continuing, Stanley said that the realization of a great dream of those who had been and were engaged in the work of exploring and civilizing the African continent, from the Cape of Good Hope to Cairo now became a possibility. God, he added, had given the Premier wisdom to act to this end and long might he live and flourish.

Will Complete the Canal.

PANAMA, June 20.—Lieut. Wyse has arrived to arrange with the Colombian Government for the extension of the concession in order to complete the Panama canal, having been sent by M. Menchecourt, present liquidator of the Panama Canal Co.

More Bonds for the States.

MONTREAL, June 20.—The confidential clerk and collector of H. C. Levy, real estate agent, named Bryant, has gone to the States with $5000 of his employer's money.

THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

A Protest Against Precedence Given to Catholic Prelates.

OTTAWA, June 20.—The general assembly of the Presbyterian church sitting here are following the example of the Methodists. They passed a resolution to-day condemning the order of precedence given to Papal dignitaries over other clergy on state occasions, and asked that the same be removed.

FROM THE CAPITAL.

The Supposed Object of Sir John Thompson's Visit.

OTTAWA, June 20.—It is understood that Sir John Thompson, Minister of Justice, leaves for Europe on Thursday next. While the department refuses to give his object in going there, it is doubtless in connection with the Atlantic and Behring Sea fisheries negotiations pending between the United States and the Imperial Government with a view of assisting in the settlement of the same. There is also the Copyright Act, which still stands in abeyance, besides a number of other cases. He will be absent for a couple of months or more. This will put an end to the rumors of Sir Charles Tupper coming to Canada.

FRAUDULENT SUGAR TESTS.

The Customs Officers Favor the Sugar Trust to the Detriment of Spreckles.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., June 20.—Claus Spreckles, the sugar refiner, through his attorney, W. Ford Thomas, yesterday made a formal complaint to Secretary of the Treasury Windom that the New York custom house has been discriminating in its polariscopic tests of imported German beet sugars in favor of the sugar trust and against the Philadelphia refiner, and to his detriment to the amount of $10,000 on each cargo he imports. He says: "I do not make a specific charge against any officer of the customs. I do not know a single individual having anything whatever to do with the examination or the testing of the sugars in New York; but in the face of evidence before me, I boldly assert that we have been wronged and I call upon the honorable Secretary of the Treasury to protect us in this matter."

MUSIC IN THE PARK.

TO THE EDITOR—In your issue of 17th inst., I noticed a letter signed Donald Fraser, protesting against the music at the park Sunday afternoons, and giving three reasons for so protesting: 1. This band playing is a profanation of the Lord's day. 2. The playing of the band so close to a tavern is a serious danger to the young and thoughtless. 3. The subsidizing of the band under the circumstances would clearly be a misappropriation of public funds.

In answer to this I would say that the people who visit Beacon Hill Sunday afternoons do not go there "to worship God," although it is quite possible to worship Him on Beacon Hill, as Mr. Fraser says. Surrounded as we are by the grandeurs and beauties of His handiwork, if one but stops to think, they cannot fail being impressed with the evidence of the Omnipotence. But we build churches, and devote them entirely to the worship of the Almighty, and the time we spend at the park need not necessarily infringe on the hours set apart for service in the churches. The park is one of our resting places. Rest is simply a change from the ordinary routine of every-day life. We rest sitting, we rest lying, we rest while we ride, we change from one task to another simply to obtain a few moments rest from the task we are weary of. Then, I say, why can we not rest ourselves by changing the hum drum of every-day life by a visit to our beautiful park on Sabbath afternoons and listening to the music of some of the grandest composers who ever lived. I have carefully examined the programmes of the concerts so far given on Sunday afternoons, and cannot find any of the lively airs mentioned by the reverend gentleman. Evidently he was not there. The following are the selections given on the 8th and 15th inst.

Grand March	Ariel	Bennett
Selection	Sacred	De Lacy
Antacon	Holy Voices
Selection	Gipsy Bride
Second Selection		Beyer
Grand March	Progress	Godfrey
Grand Fantasia	Norma	Berger
Grand Selection	Atlanta	Williams
Grand March	Albert Edward	Lee
Anthem	Holy Voices	Dudley
Grand Fantasia		Godfrey
Sacred Selection	Refuge	Beyer
March	St. Elmo	Lacy
Kyrie and Gloria		Mozart
Anthem	Nazareth	Gounod
Grand March	Progress	Lacy
National Anthem.

On Sunday June 1, that incomparable chorus, "Heavens are Telling," was among the numbers given. Does such music as this profane God's day? Does such music as this tend to debase humanity, or does it tend to stimulate their nobler feelings and impulses?

Taking another view of the question, how many hardworking men who have no other time to enjoy a treat of this kind are refreshed and strengthened for another week of toil, by this afternoon of sunshine and music. Church morning and evening and the Park in the afternoon is their Sunday programme, and I contend that the concert is not the least beneficial part of their day's rest.

The playing of a band close to a tavern is serious. There is a saloon or two at an even shorter distance from the post office. This also is very serious. For in the case of the post office, there is the place where we have to send our children, when we can't go ourselves, "and there is the trap." "The devil has the snare skillfully arranged," and his snares are skillfully arranged all over the country, and how are we to prevent the "young and thoughtless" from being entangled any day or any hour, either in the city or at the park. Does the reverend gentleman mean to imply that the band is hired by the tavern keeper to advertise his saloon, or has the band stand been by an oversight located in the wrong place? If either one of these theories is correct by all means move the stand to some safer location and let us still have the music.

Why does Mr. Fraser impute wrong motives to the frequenters of the Park on Sunday afternoons? What makes him think that men go their for purposes other than breathing in the fresh air and sunshine and listening to the music? The propagation of those who visit the saloon is impositionably small compared to the number of those who visit the Park, and who would no more enter the place than they would wade through Goodacre Lake.

And in regard to his last objection, the subsidizing of the band by the city, I will say, that while this might be a doubtful use to put the public funds to, I firmly believe they are frequently placed where they do not accomplish one half of the good that they would there. If there is a general objection to using public money for this purpose, let those who are in favor of these Sunday afternoon concerts, remunerate the musicians by a private contribution. The cost is very small, nothing in comparison to the pleasure afforded to the hundreds who weekly listen to the music. Success to the Sunday afternoon concerts. T. J. BERRYMAN.

CHAPTER XII.

IN WHICH J. T. MASTON HEROICALLY CONTINUES TO BE SILENT.

According to a former story a gun was to be employed to throw the projectile from the earth to the moon; now the gun was to be employed to change the earth's axis. The cannon, always the cannon; these gunners of the gun club had nothing else in their heads but the cannon. They had a real crease for the cannon. Was this brutal engine again threatening the universe? Yes, we are sorry to confess it, it was a cannon which was uppermost in the mind of President Barbicane and his associates. After the Columbiad of Florida they had gone on to the monster cannon of the place "X." We may almost hear them shout with a loud voice: "Take aim at the moon." First act, "Fire." "Change the axis of the earth." Second act, "Fire." And the wish which the whole world had for them was: "To hell." Third act, "Fire." And really their scheme justified the popular opinion.

As it was, the publication of this last report of the committee in the newspapers produced an effect of which one can scarcely form an idea. The operation to be tried by President Barbicane and Captain Nicholl, it was very clear, was going to bring about one of the most disastrous interruptions in the daily routine of the earth. Every body understood what the consequences of it would be. Therefore the experiment of Barbicane & Co. was generally cursed, denounced, etc. In the Old as well as in the New World the members of the N. P. P. A. had at the time only enemies. If there were indeed a few friends left to them among their cranky American admirers they were very few.

Regarding only their personal security, President Barbicane and Captain Nicholl had acted wisely in leaving Baltimore and America. It was safe to believe that some accident had happened to them. They could not without Divine punishment threaten fourteen hundred million inhabitants by a change wrought in the habitability of the earth.

But how was it possible that the two leaders of the gun club had disappeared without leaving any trace behind them? How could they have sent away the material and assistants which were necessary to such an operation without any one seeing them? A hundred railroad cars, if it was by rail; a hundred vessels, if it was by water, would not have been more than sufficient to transport the loads of metal, of coal and of meli-melonite. It was entirely incomprehensible how this departure could have been made incognito. However, it was done. And still more serious it appeared when it was known after inquiry that no orders had been sent to the gun foundries or powder factories, or the factories which produce chemical products in either of the two continents. How inexplicable all this was! Without doubt it would be explained some day.

At any rate, if President Barbicane and Captain Nicholl, who had mysteriously disappeared, were sheltered from any immediate danger, their colleague, Mr. Maston, was under lock and key, and had to face all the public indignation. Nothing could make him yield, however. Deep at the bottom of the cell which he occupied in the prison of Baltimore the secretary of the gun club gave himself up more and more to thinking of those distant associates whom he was not able to follow. He pictured the vision of President Barbicane and his associate, Captain Nicholl, preparing their gigantic operation at this unknown point of the globe, with nothing in their way. He saw them build their enormous device, molding the meli-melonite, molding the projectile which the sun would so soon count as one of its small satellites. This new star was to have the charming name "Scorbetta," in gallant acknowledgment of the love and esteem felt towards the rich capitalist widow of New Park. J. T. Maston calculated the days which would elapse before the one on which the gun would be fired.

It was already the beginning of April. In two months and a half the meridian star, after having stopped on the Tropic of Cancer, would go back towards the Tropic of Capricorn. Three months later it would traverse the equatorial line at the fall equinox.

And then these seasons, which have appeared annually for millions of years, and which have changed so regularly, will be brought to an end. For the last time in 189— the sphere would have submitted to this succession of days and nights. Truly, this was a magnificent work, superhuman, even divine. J. T. Maston forgot the Arctic region and the exploration of the coal mines around the Pole, and he only saw, in his mind's eye, the cosmographic consequences of the operation. The principal object of the association was now to make those changes and displacements which were to remodel the face of the earth.

But that was just the point. Did the earth wish to change her face at all? Was she not still young and charming with the one which God had given her at the first hour of her creation?

Alone and defenseless in his prison cell, nothing could induce Mr. Maston to speak about the matter, no matter what plan was tried. The members of the inquiring committee urged him daily to speak and visited him daily, but they could obtain nothing. It was about this time that John Prestice had the idea of using an influence which might possibly succeed, and this was the aid of Mrs. Evangelina Scorbitt. Every one knew what feelings the generous widow entertained for Mr. Maston, how devoted she was to him and what unlimited interest she had in this celebrated calculator. Therefore, after deliberation of the committee, Mrs. Evangelina Scorbitt was authorized to come and go, visiting the prisoner as much as she liked.

Was she not threatened just as well as any other person on this earth by the recoil of this monster cannon? Would her palace at New Park be spared any more than the smallest hut of the Indian? Was not her very existence just as much in doubt as that of the savage living on the furthest isle of the Pacific Ocean? That is what the president of the inquiry committee gave her to understand and for this reason she was begged to use her influence with the mathematician. If he would consent to speak and would say at what place President Barbicane and Captain Nicholl were, and how many people they had with them to accomplish their ends, it would yet be time to go and stop them and put an end to their project, and thus save humanity from this most dangerous catastrophe which threatened the world.

Mrs. Evangelina Scorbitt was therefore admitted to the prison whenever she wished it. She was most desirous of seeing J. T. Maston again after he had been taken from his comfortable study at Ballistic Cottage by those rough police agents. If any impolite person had on the 9th of April put his ear at the door of his cell the first time when Mrs. Scorbitt entered he would have heard the following conversation:

"Ah, at last, my dear Maston, I see you again."

"You, Mrs. Scorbitt!"

"Yes, my dear friend, after four weeks—four long weeks of separation."

"Exactly twenty-eight days, five hours and forty-five minutes," answered J. T. Maston, after having consulted his watch.

"Finally we are reunited."

"But how did it happen that they allowed you to penetrate as far as this cell to see me, dear Mrs. Scorbitt?"

"Under the condition of using all my influence over you, thanks to my affection for you, in advising you to disclose the secret of the whereabouts of President Barbicane."

"What, Evangelina!" cried Mr. Maston, "and you have consented to give me such advice. You have entertained the thought that I could betray my associates?"

"Me, dear Maston! Do you consider me so bad? Me! to sacrifice your security for your honor. Me! to persuade you to an act which would shame a life consecrated entirely to the highest speculations of pure mathematics."

"Bravo, Mrs. Scorbitt! I see in you once more the generous patron of our society. No. I have never doubted your great heart."

"Thank you, Mr. Maston."

"In regard to myself," continued Maston, "allow me to say, before telling the point of the earth where our great shooting will take place—sell, so to speak, the secret which I have been able to keep so well, to allow these barbarians to fly and pursue our friends, to interrupt their works, which will make our profit and glory, I would rather die."

"Splendid, Mr. Maston!" cried Mrs. Evangelina Scorbitt.

And these two beings, united by the same enthusiasm, crased by it if you will, one as well as the other, were well matched in understanding each other perfectly.

"No, they will never know the name of the country which my calculations have designated and the reputation of which will become immortal," said J. T. Maston. "They can silence me if they like, but they will never have the secret from me."

"And they can kill me with you," said Mrs. Evangelina Scorbitt; "I will also be mute."

"It is lucky, dear Evangelina, that they are ignorant of your knowledge of the place."

"Do you believe that I would be capable of betraying it, because I am only a woman? Betray my associates and you! No, my friend, no. If they should raise the whole city and country against you—if the whole world would come to the door of this cell to take you away I shall be there, too, and we will at least have one consolation—we will die together."

As if there could be any greater consolation and Mr. Maston could dream of a sweeter death than dying in the arms of Mrs. Evangelina Scorbitt! And so ended the conversation every time that this excellent woman visited the prisoner. And when the inquiry committee asked her what the result was she would say: "Nothing as yet; perhaps with time I shall be able to reach my point."

Ah, women! women! What are women?

"In time," she urged. But time went on with fast steps. Weeks went round like days, days like hours and hours like minutes.

It was already May. Mrs. Evangelina Scorbitt had not been able to get any information from J. T. Maston, and where she had failed there was no hope of any other person succeeding. Was it then necessary to accept this terrible shock without interfering in any way? No, no! Under such circumstances resignation was impossible.

The European delegates became more and more out of spirits. There was wrangling between them every day. Even Jacques Jansen woke up out of his Dutch placidity and annoyed his colleagues greatly by his daily charges and countercharges. Colonel Boris Karkof even had a duel with the secretary of the inquiry committee, in which he only slightly injured his adversary. And Major Donellan; well, he neither fought with fire-arms nor with bare fists, quite contrary to English use, and he only looked on while his secretary, Dean Toodrink, exchanged a few blows according to prize-ring rules with William S. Forster, the phlegmatic dealer in codfish, the straw man of the N. P. P. A., who really knew absolutely nothing of the affair.

The whole world was leagued against the United States and wanted to hold the Americans responsible for the actions of one of their number—the celebrated Impey Barbicane. There was talk of recalling the Ambassadors and the foreign Ministers at present accredited to this most reckless Government at Washington and of declaring war against the United States. Poor United States! It only wished to lay its hands on Barbicane & Co. In vain did the republic reply to the powers of Europe, Asia, Africa and Australia that they were at liberty to arrest these adventurous Americans wherever they found them. Nobody would listen patiently to such talk. And so, far away President Barbicane and his associate were occupied in preparing their great operation. As nothing could be found of them the foreign countries began to say: "You have their accomplice; now, it is sure that Mr. Maston knows where these people are and what they are doing. Make him speak, this man, Mr. Maston. Why not use hot oil, melted lead, etc.? Why not use such means as were used formerly under circumstances less grave and for cases which only interested a few private people. But it was answered that while such means were justified in former times they could not be used at the end of a century as far advanced as the nineteenth century was. Therefore, J. T. Maston had nothing to fear in that line; all that was left to hope was that he would finally consider the enormity of his crime and would decide to reveal his secret or that some accident would reveal it for him.

ROCKY MOUNTAIN CLUB.

PROCEEDINGS AS CHRONICLED BY THE HISTORIAN.

The Duck Lake Fight With Riel's Half-breeds—Crozier's Unsuccessful Forage for Oats—An Incident of the War Never Before Related—Bruce or Huron.

DUCK LAKE FIGHT.

It will be remembered that a certain Louis Riel, variously described as a saint, a lunatic, and a scoundrel, noted as having raised a bad disturbance on the Red river in 1871, got up a second rebellion in 1885; for which thereafter he suffered martyrdom, being ignominiously hanged; and became of high rank away up among the gods in French Canada. The rebellion was based on a notable land grievance originating among the halfbreed descendants of the Hudson's Bay Company's voyageurs, who had emigrated westward to some fifty miles above the forks of the Saskatchewan, a place named Batoche. The war spread among the Indian tribes half way to the Rocky mountains and its first event was the small and particularly bloody action known as Duck Lake Fight. Two or three members of our club had taken part in events of that time, and one, a young farmer of Prince Albert Settlement, Sask., now a survey hand, told the following story of the fight:

"We were shut up in Fort Carlton for some days waiting for Colonel Irvine with a division of mounted police from the south. Riel was either at Batoche with his ambush of three hundred men waiting for Irvine, or at Duck Lake trading post, which was twelve miles south of us, and half way to Batoche, which was on the south Saskatchewan, Carlton being on the north branch. We numbered a hundred Mounted Police under Paddy Crozier, the finest men in the country, and fifty of us civilians from Prince Albert under Capt. Moore who lost a leg in the fight. We had to work all the time with no sleep, patrols shot at every night, and a traitor tried to spike our only gun in the middle of the square. A party was sent out on the 24th March for forage, but half way to Duck Lake got turned back by Gabriel Dumont, Riel's general, with a large force. Crozier found he couldn't stand waiting any longer, so made up his mind to get the forage and thrash the enemy too before relief came. Had he known that the relief was within four hour's march of the fort he would have been more patient.

"So on that memorable 26th March Crozier asked for volunteers, 50 police and 35 of us; but at the start every man in the fort made an attempt to get on the sleighs, and many were turned back three or four times. We came to Chief Beardy's place without seeing any rebels and had but two miles more to go. Here there was a little slope downwards with popular bush on either side; and at the foot an open space with a coulee (gully) from the left in the middle of it, and high ground beyond. Along the right of the level trail was a snake fence coming up to the corner of the bush, and then striking at right angles with a disused trail between fence and copse, that led to Beardy's shanty and barn. Seeing a number of halfbreeds riding along the high ground beyond the level, and more in the bush, Crozier formed up his party on the left of the trail with the gun on his right, all being in deep snow; and sent the horses, with one man to every four, to the rear. We were at the foot of the little slope, but not quite up to the fence corner, so that we did not see Beardy's house. An Indian appeared with a white cloth, and was allowed to advance. Under cover of talking to Crozier he tried to wrench the rifle from the horn of Joe McKay, the interpreter, saddle. Whereupon Joe fired five revolver bullets into him.

"Meanwhile the halfbreeds and Indians who numbered 261, got under cover along the coulee ahead, and in the bush, making a horse shoe line round us. Allowing for the men with the horses and surgeon, etc., we had 65 men out in the open to fight the rebels. They wanted us a little nearer the coulee, which would have opened behind as a trail leading from Beardy's house through the bush, so that they could have cut off our party, and done what the Sioux did to Custer. It was a pity to disappoint them.

"At the moment Joe McKay killed the Indian a shot was heard from the bush, and then Crozier roared out, 'Fire!' A few minutes after he learned that I had been shot, and wanted to know what was the matter with the gun.

"'Never mind me!'

"The police were all ordered under and into the sleighs, but Supt. Crozier, the Doctor and the Sergeant Major had no objection to bullets. The Doctor got one in his pocket book; and one of the police was scalped by a bullet. The Indians declared afterwards that the white people didn't fight fair, because they had a gun that "shot twice." The first shell killed four of them, which was discouraging certainly. The piece had only been fired twice when number one was shot dead as he was loading; and number two, thinking the powder charge was in, rammed home the shell, which got behind the rifling, where the powder should have been, and disabled the gun.

"Had we volunteers stayed with the police, who, thanks to discipline, lost only three men I would have no story worth telling. But we were led through deep snow up the disused trail between the fence and bush, which was commanded by the picked men of the rebels in Beardy's house. So the captain was wounded, and nine killed; and we had to retreat, leaving the bodies in the snow. I was the last, and, unnoticed by the others, fell with a shot through my leg, and was left for dead, and may you fellows never know the like of it.

"Crozier had had enough of it—twelve killed and eight wounded in twenty minutes, and no impression made on an invisible enemy of four times our strength. He concluded he would not get the oats he had come for that day; and as he could not bear to lose any more good men unless he took a decent price of rebels for them. I learned afterwards we only killed twenty-one of them, and some thrown into a well at Beardy's, Indians probably.

"Three horses dropped while they were being harnessed, and then the command filed off into the trail, and rode back quietly to Carlton, leaving me and the dead to the enemy. As they entered the fort at one side Col. Irvine with his relief of B Division (100 men), having found out and escaped Riel's ambush, after a splendid forced march of over three hundred miles, rode in at the other. It would have been worth Crozier's while to wait.

"I had been trying to drag myself through the corner of bush to the main party, and when I saw the retreat and shouting was no good on account of the noise, I indulged in a fainting fit. I had lost quite a lot of blood already. When I woke an Indian was brandishing a rifle over my head. I put up my hand, but the blow broke three fingers. He was getting ready for another blow to finish me when a halfbreed with whom I was well acquainted came up, and when he saw it was me he hauled the Indian off. I don't remember much more until I found myself with five white men at Duck Lake, prisoners in a loft. They had been taken at various times and were waiting to hear all I had to say about the fight, for they heard the firing, and saw Riel ride off brandishing a cross. Mr. Riel kept at a reasonable distance from where the firing was all the same. They did all they could for me, which was not much, and I was pretty sick. The next thing we heard was that Fort Carlton had been burnt and evacuated, and the garrison retreated to Prince Albert. Then Riel sent in word to them to come and take away the dead—the only decent thing he ever did; and some of the citizens volunteered and came without arms for the bodies. Riel handed me over, too, because I was too much trouble. There's not much more to say and I have been talking too long already. You all know how the Canadian militia got to the scene within seven weeks; and the rest of the rebellion after they came, didn't amount to so much, although there was more fuss made about it."

"Where are you from, stranger?"

"Ontario."

"Bruce, or Huron?"

"Well, you see. I can't exactly say. The old homestead's in Bruce, now they've staked out counties, but the cow house is in Huron. So you see it lies between the two."

"Probably Huron, stranger."

"The poor fellow proceeded to hold an indignation meeting, and was not appeased even when the 'stranger' proceeded to console him in the same strain. A very promising quarrel was interrupted by Jack, who told the contestants that if they wanted to start a mutual admiration society the gratulations might be exchanged on the spot, but 'decorations' must be conferred outside. The Club adjourned to witness the ceremony, and the exercises were of a very elaborate character, ending in the offensive 'stranger' being laid up for repairs. The War Spirit slumbers, not dies, in times of peace.

A Faith Healer Hooted.

ST. LOUIS, June 18.—Mrs. Woodworth, the alleged prophetess and faith healer, who says she predicted the Pacific coast convulsions, has for the last six weeks made St. Louis her home, establishing her quarters in a so-called gospel tent in the rookery of Jefferson and Gamble streets. Prophetess Woodworth recently struck a streak of particularly hard luck. For the last two nights her tent has served as a net for bushels of bricks and cobblestones, hurled by a mob which indignantly repudiated Marie and her pretended gifts. The seeress declares she is being persecuted because Father Harty declaimed against her last Sunday at St. Bridget's church. She believes the Roman Catholics are persecuting her, and says she will not discontinue her revivals.

The execution took place to-day at Belleville of Peter Davis, for the murder of Wm. Emory, a farmer. Davis fully realized his position. He acknowledges his intimacy with Mrs. Emory, but denies that he murdered her husband.

Dubois, the Quebec murderer, longs to see how things are on the other side, so he said to the parson to-day. He eats, drinks and sleeps as though there was nothing to trouble him.

A colored woman named Betsy Johnston, was stricken with paralysis at Halifax last night. Just previous to being attacked she uttered an oath, and her maker was blasphemed in a terrible manner.

Sir John Thompson, Minister of Justice, leaves for England next week on business of public import. It is reported he will consult the imperial authorities relative to the trouble over Canadian copyright.

The troopship Tyne has left England with drafts for the West Riding Regiment and Royal Engineers, Halifax. She has two large torpedo boats for that port. They are capable of holding four large torpedoes and are built on the most improved plan.

The Halifax amalgamated trades union is boycotting the Amherst Boot and Shoe Co., owing to the discharge of workmen for the reason that they were Knights of Labor. A committee was appointed to ascertain what Halifax merchants are selling the company's goods.

At Black Lake, Que., yesterday, lightning struck the powder building of the Anglo-Canadian Asbestos mine, and set fire to it, resulting in an explosion of about 1890 pounds of powder and about thirty cases of dualin. The shock was very severe and heavy and caused more or less damage to about thirty buildings. The loss is estimated at $40,000. One man was injured.

Yesterday the Howard Pulp factory, Montreal, took fire, and a workman named James Gibbon jumped from the window and fractured his leg, and was taken to the hospital. Two girls also leaped from the second story and were picked up insensible. Damage $10,000 covered by insurance.

Views on Independents.

The fact that Hon. John Robson has really been returned at the head of the poll in Westminster District is a matter of great rejoicing for the Government organs. It may be regarded more, however, as a proof of the influence that attaches to the position than as the result of either personal or political popularity. A cabinet minister has always, other things being equal, an advantage over other candidates, and when to that honorable position is added the dignity of the premiership, the leverage is doubly great. The practical common-sense, level-headed electors of the Westminster District know that it is to their interest to return Hon. John Robson to represent them, the wisdom of which is apparent when one considers the predominance in the Government of Island influence, but, they also show their real political feelings and a good deal of shrewdness by electing two independent members to look after him.

Talking of the Premier, it is a matter of doubt to what extent Mr. Robson has been elected, and the Globe's celebrated majority of one for Mr. Blake has a tearful significance for the supposed Premier. Mr. Foster, one of the two Independent members elected for Nanaimo District, was in the city yesterday and to-day. He is a young man, one of the "people," and has opinions of his own on the situation. His opinion of the Government majority is that it depends largely upon how the Independents remain true to the platform upon which they were elected. He is fearful that the blandishments of the Premier may be too much for some of them. As Independent they must go on one side or the other, and as the Opposition to many of them is quite as distasteful as the Government party, to properly assert their principles they would be required to sit on the floor, a position that would be neither pleasant nor dignified.—Vancouver Telegram.

The British Board of Trade has taken up the subject of ocean racing, and the result will probably be a discontinuance of the practice. By some it has been held that the practice of steamboat racing is really conducive to safety as when a race is on the engineers, wheelmen and others concerned are more alert than at ordinary times, and the machinery is more closely looked after. But the average passenger will be just as well satisfied to see the practice stopped. It is better to be a little late sometimes than to get killed too precipitately.

"FUNNY JOURNALISM."

An eastern contemporary, inspired by a magazine article upon the subject of "Funny Journalism," gravely remarks that "this world was not made for fun; that, however, pleasing or popular the funny writing of a journal may be it does not count for much when the day's work is ended." Judging of this gloomy dictum, our contemporary like the magazine writer, would hold the press responsible for its volatility, its "trivialities," its personalities, etc. It is unquestionably true that American journalists give fuller reign to their fancy, strain oftener for effect, than do either Canadian or English journalists, but what is the cause of it. They have discovered that the people relish it. American journalists are no more responsible for the sensational features which are the characteristic of their newspapers than is the American public responsible for the ponderous conservatism of the the London Times. The successful journalist studies human nature and conforms to his environment. If his patrons mostly are church goers he is orthodox, or at least he takes good care not to be officiously heterodox. If the bulk of his subscribers are female suffragists the chances are his allusions to "woman's sphere" are effusively courteous. If his lot, unfortunately, be cast among protectionists, he will, if he has an eye to business, descant eloquently on the necessity of protecting the country's "budding industries." If his neighbourhood be comprised chiefly of annexationists, he dilates upon the great Republic, and sagely concludes that its destiny is the absorption of all space between the north pole and the tropic of cancer. If he live in a prohibition community, he treats of abstinence as one of the cardinal virtues, buys his whisky by the gallon and drinks it in solitude. And finally, if he lives among a people volatile, prone to light reading, dancing Sunday picnics and the like, he preaches that a little nonsense now and then is relished by the best of men, and justifies Sabbath desecration by remarking that "Sunday was made for man and not man for Sunday." Have we not in this an explanation of the "trivialities and the personalities," etc., peculiar to the American press? In Canada it is different. Canadians are a graver people than the Americans, partly because of climate and partly because they are less religious, and less cosmopolitan than their American cousins. Canadian newspapers are a pretty good index of their environment, reliable and not over laden with levity; occupying, in fact, middle ground between American sensationalism and John Bull conservatism. They are conservative without being tiresome, instructive without being didactic, lively without being sensational, and sensational without being immoral. The American regards them as an acceptable compromise on John Bull solemnity and American levity. John Bull, if we may presume to hazard a guess as to his opinion of Canadian newspapers, regards them as commendably well sustained efforts, and as samples of intellectuality all that could be expected of "provincials." Considering the source from whence the Canadian newspaper comes it will do, but—and he turns to the ponderous and painfully grammatical periods of the TIMES as his only solace and his only true comforter. The TIMES furnishes him with just what he wants, something which not merely penetrates but knocks him down. But we have discussed this subject at greater length than we intended, not to mention having drifted from the line of argument originally laid down, we will conclude by quoting from the very paper that deprecates "Funny Journalism."

"The hen which made a tremendous fuss over the fact that she discovered a porcelain egg under her was not a patch to the editor of the Fort Arthur News Lynch, who on the day after the elections could scarcely hold himself in the earth because he had discovered that the Liberal candidate for Algoma West had been defeated, that Hon. G. W. Ross had met with a similar fate, and the Province had declared "strong for Meredith!" It was a case of previousness such as one rarely meets with."

THE COLONIST WANTS TO KNOW.

The Colonist asks the TIMES a very foolish question. It wants to know from the TIMES whether the workingmen in this city are in favor of single tax or not. Now, Colonist, as between you and us and the gate post, the TIMES don't know. The TIMES is not in the confidence of the workingmen of this city after the fashion of the confidence existing between the Colonist and the Government. The TIMES, therefore, couldn't possibility speak for the workingmen of this city on the single tax question. The TIMES would point out to the Colonist, however, that in all probability there are single tax men among the workingmen of this city. There are, also, among them men who do not favor single tax. It may be conceived that workingmen who own lots in this city, Port Angeles, and other incipient railway terminuses, are anti-Georgian are in favor of continuing the House of Lords, and look upon the $200 deposit law as a dispensation of Providence. In this matter, however, to insure accuracy, the best course for the Colonist to pursue is to personally canvass among the workingmen of this city with respect to their political predilections, and wherever it finds a single taxist, offer him the Daily Colonist free for a year that he may learn the error of his ways. Unless the Colonist acts upon this advice it must remain in doubt with respect to the question it propounds to the TIMES. The TIMES, in the language of the Colonist's political chief, "is not in a position to say" whether workingmen are in favor of single tax or not.

SURRENDER OF HELIGOLAND.

It appears that in the division of the African spoils, Lord SALISBURY, to balance things, has ceded to Germany the island of Heligoland. Heligoland has an area of less than a square mile and a population of about 2,000. England wrested the island from Denmark during the Napoleonic wars, and has since held it for strategic purposes. The use of steam in naval warfare has however destroyed Heligoland as a strategic point, and hence in surrendering it to Germany for an African equivalent we have a transaction sound from a business point of view, though perhaps somewhat counter to British pride, which is constitutionally opposed to the abandoning of real estate of whatever description. Both the Liberals and the Radicals, we understand, will oppose the "surrender," as it is called. The Radicals profess to be unable to see that Germany has made any concessions in Africa at all. The Liberals, it is said are "little less inconsistent," and will join issue with the Radicals. It is beginning to look now as if SALISBURY's Government was doomed to early extinction. The average Britisher can stand a good deal, but the surrendering of real estate is the last straw which breaks the camel's back. Any surrender of the ancient possessions of England, however trivial, seems loss of prestige, and English pride irrespective of political affiliations revolts against it. But SALISBURY's Government is unpopular, and in that we can understand the almost universal hostility which is being manifested toward his foreign policy.

SIR JOSEPH HICKSON ON ANNEXATION.

The Detroit Free Press publishes an interview with Sir JOSEPH HICKSON of the Grand Trunk Railway. This is what Mr. Sir JOSEPH says:

"Please do not expect me to talk politics. That is a species of indulgence—or shall we call it dissipation—in which I never indulge. For business men the entrance of the road to politics should be guarded with the inscription: 'He who enters here leaves hope behind.' Many a promising and useful business life has been hopelessly wrecked in midstream through striking upon the flinty but seductive rocks of politics. The active business man has nothing whatever in common with such a life. Politics is a profession, and to succeed in it one should start early in life and devote his whole time to it. Even then he will be apt to discover before he has proceeded very far that he has mistaken his vocation. Great politicians, like great poets, are born—seldom made. Now that the political subject has been broached, however, I do not mind stating that anything in the way of agitation against Canadian interests in this country only serves to defeat the plans and hopes of the annexationists. To succeed, Canadians must be placated—never antagonized. An opinion seems to have gained more or less circulation on this side that by hampering and interfering with Canadian commercial interests annexation will be forced upon us. A more mistaken idea was never promulgated. We are not of the sort of people who brook being driven. We feel very friendly toward the citizens of this country, but we shall always find a way to maintain and preserve our own respect."

FATAL TO MACDONALDISM.

With direct taxation in the provinces we would have very little Morrissism—Montreal Herald.

"And," says the Montreal Herald, "a very short stay in Macdonaldism if there were direct taxation in the Dominion. Sir JOHN would not then boast of being able to bribe the people with their own money. He would not then be able to squander $2,500,000 on an admittedly unnecessary road in order to secure seats in Parliament for the TUPPERS, MCKAYS and MCDONALDS. He would not then be able to present the Chignecto Ship Railway with $330,000 for twenty years merely because Sir CHARLES TUPPER for some reason or another wanted it done. He would not then be able to spend $1,500,000 of the public money to steal rail a private railway, in order that one of his own colleagues, who owned it, should be able to force it upon another company at an enhanced price. He would not then be able to allow enormous sums for "extras" to contractors on the implied condition that they handed over to himself and his friends such sums as they might call for. With direct taxation, as the Gazette suggests, there would be no Macdonaldism, the regime of robbery and corruption would be destroyed."

It seems incredible that the venality of the Ottawa regime here implied should be permitted to exist; and yet when we come to remember our own little tempest in a teapot, the defection of Kootenay, the imbecility of Yale, and the inertness of Cowichan, we can only exclaim that the fetich of Robsonianism, like that of Macdonaldism, passes understanding.

A VANISHING DEBT.

The following is from the Toronto Mail:

The United States Census Office has already made public the first results of the eleventh census, namely, those having relation to State and local finance. Two preliminary reports have been made—on State and county indebtedness respectively—and they are most interesting. It is shown that at the present time the principal of the State debts amounts to $228,679,000, of which $194,954,000 is bonded, and $33,275,000 floating debt. During the ten years since the last census the bonded debt of the various States has been decreased by $64,083,000, and the floating debt increased by $9,523,000, making a net decrease in the decade of $54,459,000. In each of the Geographical groups of States, namely, Eastern, Middle, Southern and Western, there has been a decrease, the greatest being that in the Southern group, the smallest that in the Western. The reduction has been effected mainly by applying the revenues not needed for current expenses to the redemption of obligations, but in a few cases there has been a forced redemption at a discount. Taking the bonded indebtedness alone of the various States we find the following reductions:

Eastern States	$ 50,083,164	$36,597,887
Middle States	44,649,379	32,891,911
Southern States	129,496,701	95,677,362
Western States	35,858,211	30,086,843
Total	$259,937,455	$194,954,203

Now, the reduction in the national bonded debt during the same decade has been still greater in proportion. In 1880 that debt was $1,709,993,100; to-day it is only $719,178,570, and it would be even less were it not that the work of redemption has already been carried some distance into the future. Taking the national and state bonded indebtedness together we find the following remarkable results:

	1880.	1890.
Several States	259,937,455	194,954,205
Total	$1,969,930,555	$914,132,775

In ten years there has been a reduction of no less than $1,050,000,000, or over fifty per cent.

The second report shows the indebtedness of the 2,809 counties of the United States and Territories, and in this case there has been an increase during the decade. In 1880 the bonded debt of the counties amounted to $104,490,752, and the floating debt to $16,745,881; at the present time the bonded debt is $130,780,959, and the floating debt $14,958,881. There has thus been an increase in the total debt during the ten years of $24,454,756. It will thus be seen that while the several States are following the example of the nation in reducing their liabilities and discharging their obligations, the counties are not. What the reason for this may be the report does not state.

There will be no more striking page in the history of the United States than that describing the wonderful manner in which the great war debt was liquidated. Between the years 1862 and 1863 the indebtedness of the nation was suddenly increased from $524,000,000 to nearly $1,120,000,000, and by the year 1866 it had risen to the enormous sum of $2,773,000,000. In less than a quarter of a century this tremendous burden has been reduced in the most marvellous manner, and at the beginning of the present year the debt of the United States, less cash in the Treasury, was only $1,056,000,000. The interest-bearing debt is only about $800,000,000, which with the bonded indebtedness of the several States makes a total of about $1,000,000,000. This is borne by a population of about 65,000,000. Turning to Canada, at the risk of being accused of disloyalty in venturing to make the comparison, we find a people numbering not more than 5,000,000 carrying a funded national debt of over $200,000,000, to say nothing of the indebtedness of their various sub-divisions. The comparison becomes all the more unfavorable to us when we remember that this indebtedness of ours is rapidly increasing, while that of our neighbors is being so speedily reduced. That this sort of thing can be continued indefinitely without doing this country serious injury is not to be for a moment believed, and yet it seems impossible to convince the statesmen at Ottawa of the pressing danger of the situation. The time will soon come, however, when, if we do nothing else, we must check the growth of our expenditures and endeavor to live within our means.

The above affords food for reflection to all those who are seriously considering what is best for the interests of Canada. The Mail intimates that our expenditures should be checked. We should say that in connection with so salutary a reform that intelligent ways and means should be considered whereby the volume of business should correspond with cost of living. The trouble with Canada is, she is living faster than the condition of her business warrants.

LIVERPOOL, B.C.

The New Westminster Southern Railway runs from Liverpool to Fairhaven, Wash., where it connects with the great Northern Pacific Railway system. The Railway Company has now under construction at Liverpool a wharf 700 feet in length, costing about $10,000, and they intend to immediately erect workshops, passenger and freight stations, etc. The road is already graded between Liverpool and Fairhaven, and it is expected that trains will be in operation between the two places by 30th August, 1890.

A portion of the town site will be on the market on and after 16th June instant, and lots will be sold at low prices for a short time, and purchasers will have the benefit of first prices.

THE WESTMINSTER ELECTIONS.

The result of the election in New Westminster yesterday has been a surprise to many people in this city. It has always been reported that Mr. LADNER stood the best chances of election though the result places him at the foot of the poll. Premier ROBSON is said to have brought this about. Mr. LADNER and friends were to have supported PUNCH and KITCHEN in the local elections, but instead of doing so the Delta went strong for KIRKLAND and ROBSON. This brought down on Mr. LADNER the vengeance of his old friends, who immediately set out to defeat him. The Premier having been elected himself came to Victoria and Mr. LADNER, left alone, fell an easy victim to misplaced confidence.

THE INDEPENDENTS.

The World, having recovered from its astonishment incident to the overthrow of Robsonianism, breaks out in its usual high-flown strain, in which stereotyped "blowing" and mendacity are about equally commingled. The TIMES has never urged that the Independents would affiliate with the Opposition. The TIMES has simply said that it was unable to see how the Independents could consistently throw themselves into the arms of the Government. The platform of the Independents forbids a coalescence of this description, and furthermore the Independents have nothing to gain by it. The grand object of the Independents should be the formation of a new government. The benefits that the Robson administration can give them are meagre compared with what would be theirs in the event of a change in the governing personnel. Surely the Independents would be fools to bow down to the "golden calf" of the Quintette when by combining with the Opposition they can "turn the rascals out." The fatuousness of the World and of the Colonist in treating the Independents as the natural allies of the Government is only equalled by the rhymeless and reasonless support they have given the Government through the recent campaign.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Although the Government bugle has been blowing for a week of a victory for the administration, it has failed to point out that out of eight members the cities have only returned one ministerialist, and him they placed at the feet of the four elected Opposition candidates. Under such circumstances wisdom would dictate that the bugle should not be blown sufficiently to draw attention to the centre of the party's weakness. But there is no such thing as wisdom connected with it. A few days ago it was shown that Mayor GRANT represented more voters than Messrs. ROBSON, VERNON, POOLEY and DAVIE, together—four members of the Government. Instead of worrying its head over "single tax" we should like to see it expatiate on Government by the minority.

DOUBLE-TRACKING GOVERNMENT STREET.

TO THE EDITOR:—Can you tell us what are the powers and privileges of the street railway company. I see they propose double-tracking Government street. If the company has the right to lay two tracks on Government street it may have a right to lay three or four. I should like to know if there is any limit to what they can do on the streets of the city. A PROPERTY OWNER.

[We cannot at the moment enlighten "A Property Owner," and would advise him to apply to Mr. Higgins, the obliging president of the company. The company will have to be governed by its franchise—the by-law giving it the for a certain number of years, to run cars on the streets of the city. And we have no doubt that it will exact its pound of flesh.—ED.]

Horace Greeley.

Says Edward W. Cox, of Cincinnati: "I was a young blood in 1848, and was stopping at the old Franklin house in Philadelphia. One day I saw coming up the hotel steps an old man wearing, among other articles, a tall white hat, with long fur and a dent in one side of it, a linen duster, and old fashioned spectacles. He carried a carpet sack, and one of his trousers legs had caught on top of one of his shoes. That man was Horace Greeley, then in the height of his fame as editor of the Tribune. I frequently attended the church in New York City where Dr. Chapin, the great Universalist minister, presided, and rarely did I miss seeing Greeley there. He had a pew in one corner of which was one of the columns that supported the roof. It was Mr. Greeley's custom to lean his head against the column, close his eyes and go serenely to sleep during the sermon, in full view of everybody. Probably these occasions were among the few that afforded the great editor an opportunity for rest, and no doubt he was benefited spiritually as well as physically."—N. Y. Tribune.

An Ill Fitting Clothes Made Him.

A group of well dressed and prosperous looking business men sat about a table in a famous downtown restaurant after luncheon a few days ago, chatting on all sorts of topics and watching the smoke rings from their cigars float up to the frescoed ceiling.

The conversation drifted after a time into tales of business success, and the eldest and most imposing member of the party did his part by telling this story:

"I owe my present prosperity," he began, "to the fact that when I was a lanky youth of 17 my clothes did not fit me. To be more explicit, I was at that age in dreadfully hard luck. My people were dead, I hadn't a friend that I could turn to, I was able to make but $6 a week, and was half starved in consequence, and my one suit (a Cheap John rig) had shrunk until the lower edge of my vest and the band of my trousers were absolutely divorced.

"One Sunday morning in December I was trudging along Sixth avenue, principally because my room was even more comfortless than the streets, and I remember how I was railing and repining at everything and everybody. I was passionately fond of music, and I went into the first church I came to, attracted solely, I must confess, by the thought of the warmth and harmony I would find.

"I was too bashful then to sit still while the rest of the congregation stood, so I got up every time they did, and as my vest and trousers were, as I told you before, not on speaking terms, I was forced to lean forward in a most reverential manner to hide my zone of shirt front. As I turned to go out at the end of the service an old gentleman behind me slipped a card into my hand and said: 'I like to see reverence in a young man. You look as if you were having a hard time of it. Come and see me to-morrow. I may help you.'

"I went and got a good berth in his employ, and from that I worked myself to comparative wealth. Queer, isn't it?"—New York Times.

NEW WESTMINSTER ELECTION.

Corbould Defeats His Opponents by Large Majorities.

A dispatch to the TIMES on Thursday night gave the election to Corbould by a large majority. The total vote was: Corbould, 962; Townsend, 695; Ladner, 372. Mr. Ladner loses his deposit. After the election of Corbould became assured in New Westminster, a procession headed by a city band and bearing flaming torches, escorted the member elect through the streets. The selection of Corbould has no particular significance, as the three candidates were all tarred with the same political stick. In their addresses at Vancouver they each tried to outdo the other in promising what they would do for the city; not one of them had a thought for national affairs or of higher politics. Mr. Townsend made a feeble attempt to talk free trade, but his vision was circumscribed to the limits of his district; while Mr. Corbould talked about everything generally and nothing in particular. Everything considered, however, it is probable the best man has been elected, for we find that the entire press of the Mainland supported Mr Corbould.

Gilbert Parker.

Mr. Parker, who gives a recital on Monday evening, comes to us with excellent recommendations from the press of the cities which he has visited. The Kansas City Times in 1885, said: "Orator is not the word to apply to Mr. Parker. He talks so naturally and with such easy eloquence and sympathy that those who go to see him must stay to hear him. Through two hours he led his audience along paths of incident, character and beauty. His swift changes from humor to pathos were so wonderfully done, they did not seem, as they really were not, unnatural. The officers at the Fort have induced him to give them another reading there immediately."

The Hamilton Spectator said in 1885: "The charm of Mr. Parker's platform work lies in his perfect naturalness. His dramatic perception and command of character are unique."

A Warning.

MR. EDITOR,—It is a well-known fact that the majority of people are inclined to look upon a cold in the head as a matter of little importance—involving at the most only a temporary inconvenience. No more disastrous mistake was ever made. The neglected cold in the head is the source of the catarrhal affections with which about seven-tenths of the people of this country are afflicted, and catarrh itself is too often the preliminary stages to consumption and death. The symptoms of catarrh are manifold, but among them may be mentioned, offensive breath; dull, oppressive headache; offensive droppings from the nostrils into the throat and bronchial tubes; deafness or partial deafness; constant hawking and spitting; weak and watery eyes; a hacking cough and feeling of general debility; ringing in the ears and frequent dizziness. These are but a few of the more general symptoms, and those who experience them should lose no time in applying a remedy. Delays are proverbially dangerous, and in the case of this too prevalent disease may lead to death. We offer Nasal Balm to the public as a positive cure for cold in the head and for catarrh in all its forms and stages. Nasal Balm has been tested in thousands of cases, and the testimonials in our possession prove that it is all we claim for it. It has cured other sufferers, it will cure you. It is easy to use, pleasant and agreeable and does not require a douche, or any torturing instrument to apply it. Give it a trial and be convinced of its great efficacy. Sold by all dealers or sent post free on receipt of price 50c. for small or $1 for large size bottles by addressing Fulford & Co., Brockville, Ont. daw

The idea of a tunnel between England and France finds no favor with military men, who see in such a scheme a possible avenue of invasion. Those who are not military men will scarcely share this view, believing as they do that a couple of fire engines would play could keep an invading force at bay if stationed at the mouth of the tunnel.

A Marine Experiment.

The steamer Moonlight arrived in San Francisco from the north on the 8th inst with a cargo of lumber. The fact that she came in under sail induced a Chronicle reporter to make inquiries concerning her. It was learned therefrom that the Moonlight was recently built in Oregon, for the purpose of testing the worth and expediency of a system of steam propulsion by means of gasoline. The tonnage of the steamer is about seventy-five. She was fitted out with a novel engine and appertaining apparatus, the whole thing being set in action by the use of gasoline. Previous experiments on lighter crafts propelled by naptha have been uniformly successful, and it was thought that gasoline would work even better still. When fairly out on the voyage, however, it developed that the experiment was a failure. The engine failed to work and got out of gear. The result is to establish the fact that gasoline or naptha is not serviceable on vessels of any great tonnage. The Moonlight had to abandon her engines and reached port, as stated, under sail.

CITY AND PROVINCIAL.

DEATHS HAND.

Two of Victoria's Oldest Settlers Pass Over the Great Divide.

Wm. Field, a native of Devonshire, England, aged 73 years, died at the residence of his son-in-law, Mr. Hy. Jewel, yesterday, after a lingering illness. The deceased was one of the early settlers, and was much respected by his many friends in Victoria. He leaves a wife, a daughter and two sons to mourn his loss. The funeral will take place on Saturday afternoon from the residence of Henry Jewell, 91 Blanchard street.

CHAS. GIESLEMAN.

Chas. Giesleman, one of Victoria's most popular and enterprising citizens, died at his residence, Vancouver street, at about 9 o'clock this morning. The deceased was evidently in as good health as ever when he arose after eating a hearty breakfast, but shortly afterwards he commenced vomiting and died almost immediately from heart disease. He was a native of Germany, aged about 60 years, and leaves two daughters, his wife having died a number of years ago. He came to Victoria in 1858, and was engage by Mr. C. Bossi as clerk in his store on Store street. In '59, the time of the San Juan excitement, he opened a store and saloon at Port Roberts where he did a good business until the excitement died out, when he returned to Victoria, and up to a few years ago he was engaged in the grocery business, his last stand having been with Mr. A. Bossi, on Yates street, where A. J. Rowbotham now is. He was also engaged for a time on the steamer Eliza Anderson, the first boat to run between the Sound and Victoria. He married in '65 Mrs. Marks, widow of L. Marks, who was along with his daughter murdered by Indians while crossing from one of the Islands to Victoria. The deceased was a member of the Pioneer Society and of Victoria Lodge No. 1, I. O. O. F., in both of which he took a lively interest. Mr. Giesleman was a whole souled charitable gentleman and was a great favorite among his many friends.

GOT KICKED OUT.

How Two Port Townsend Boys Slept in Victoria.

Among those who attended the recent celebration of the Queen's Birthday at Victoria, says the Leader, were two Port Townsend boys, who, on account of the scarcity of accommodations were obliged to lodge in a room containing two single beds. The pair retired late one night full of enthusiasm; the candle which illuminated their way was also overcome, and managed in some mysterious manner to slagger against the door of the apartment and extinguish itself. "That's all right," said Smith, "we don't want any light, do we?" "No," said Jones. "I'm used to going to bed in the dark, practiced it in childhood." Shortly after Smith announced the fact that he had found his bed and was very comfortable. Jones groped about and at last remarked, as he supposed, the vacant couch and turned in. He was in error—he had taken possession of half of Smith's bed, but was lying the inverse way with his feet resting on the pillow beside the head of his friend. After a pause Smith said: "Say, old man, there's a fellow in bed with me." "By thunder!" said Jones, "there's one in my bed, also." "Let's kick 'em out," said Smith. "I'll go you," said Jones "let's count three and let drive." They did so. Both landed on the carpet. "My man kicked me out," said Jones. "So did mine," said Smith, "let them have the beds—we can take the floor." Morning disclosed two vacant beds, one untouched. The boys agreed to keep mum, but it leaked out.

The Crops.

The rain of the last few days is not looked upon favorably in the city, but the Saanich farmers state that it is the real thing for the country. The crops are looking well and the prospects are good, especially for the hay and potato crops.

Election Notes.

Mr. C. C. Macdonald, the member elect for Nanaimo district, who is in the city, is no ahead of any election protest. An inquiry into the conduct, or a recount of the votes, will, in his opinion, be disastrous to the petitioner, since there is little doubt that the majority of the bad votes if any were polled for his opponent.

Dr. McSwain's Return.

A letter received in the city from Dr. McSwain yesterday stated that he had just returned to Charlottetown, P.E.I., from England, "greatly improved in health." While in the old country he was a patient of the famous Dr. Lawson Tait, and has been much benefited. It is possible that he may visit Victoria some time next month while on his way to Riverside.

Good Examination.

The following evidence given by the Superintendent of Education may be interesting and instructive to those attending the examinations next week.

Question—Did you not at each semi-annual examination of the Victoria high school, whilst under the principalship of J. N. Muir, compliment him highly and sometimes very highly upon the success of the school?

Answer by Mr. Pope—I have frequently carefully studied what words I could use on such occasions in order to avoid falsehood. COM.

A Grand Success.

Another large crowd were attracted to the R. C. Cathedral bazaar in Philharmonic Hall, last evening, and everything went off as smoothly as on the former evening. The fan drill and swinging chorus were equally as well sustained the booths as well patronized and the ladies are to be complimented on the manner in which they carried through their bazaar to such a successful ending. Financially the bazaar was a great success and will help materially to build the fine edifice which is now under construction. This evening at 8 o'clock the the hall will be thrown open to the public and the raffles will take place.

Wedded.

A Cornwall, Ont., despatch says:—G. E. Smessinger, of the well known firm of J. G. Smessinger & Co., was married last evening in St. John's Presbyterian church to Mrs. Della Brooks, niece of the late "Cariboo" Cameron.

Observation Signal.

An observation signal station to be established at Victoria in connection with the meterological service of the department, is to furnish storm warnings and results of observations for the benefit of the marine interests of the Pacific coast similar to those on the lakes and on the Atlantic.

Raymond Excursion.

A Raymond excursion party, consisting of 27 ladies and gentlemen, in charge of Carroll Hutchins arrived over in the city by the Olympia last evening and are registered at the Clarence. The party spent to-day in looking around the city and suburbs and will return to the Sound in the morning.

Seven New Schools.

A column of Government advertising in the Vancouver World has a peculiarity that is worth noticing. Under the date of June 12th, or the day before the Provincial elections, it announces the creation of seven new school districts in New Westminster district and the changing of the boundaries of two more districts. Of course the seven new districts had nothing to do with the election.

Fruit Thieves.

About a dozen public school boys have been summoned to appear in the police court to-morrow morning to answer to the charge of stealing a quantity of fruit from Rev. W. L. Paddon's orchard, on upper Fort street. Mr. Paddon has been very much annoyed by the boys, who seem to watch for him to leave the house, when they get into the garden and take the fruit without any regard for the growing trees.

Annual Picnic.

The Victoria City, Victoria West, Cedar Hill, and Esquimalt lodges of the I. O. G. T., have chartered a train to take them to Somenos on the 4th of July, not the 1st as has been published, for their annual picnic. At Somenos the picnicers will be met by the Nanaimo and Wellington lodges and a grand union picnic held. The Good Templars always have a good time when they go in for one, and no doubt this year's picnic will be no exception.

The Inventor Claim.

The case of Russell vs. Robertson, an action for $8,000, damages in connection with a patent for loading and unloading vessels, which was before the Supreme Court yesterday, was settled by each party agreeing to pay his own costs and the plaintiff giving the defendant judgment for $500, this being part of the amount paid over to the plaintiff by the defendant on account of a supposed useful invention. Mr. Yates for the plaintiff, Mr. Taylor for the defendant.

She Didn't Come.

A few days ago a well-known young society man of Victoria received a letter evidently written by a lady, although no name was signed to it, asking him to meet her at an appointed time and place. The young man, who by the way is a sort of a ladies' man, proceeded rather cautiously to the spot where he "waited for the girl that didn't come" until midnight, the appointment having been a good deal earlier in the evening. Of course he made out to his friends that it was all O.K., but it leaked out, and he now swears that the next letter that catches him will at least have some name attached to it.

Tony Got Dumped.

On Thursday afternoon, as two gentlemen were driving up Pandora street in an express wagon, their horse took fright and ran away with the occupants holding on to the ribbons with all their might. When nearing Blanchard street, the animal took a sudden turn and sent one of the company sprawling in the mud. The other held on until Yates street was reached when he was also thrown out and the horse continued on his course up Yates street until he was stopped near the school. Neither of the men were injured although both got pretty well shaken up.

Alexandria Lodge.

The Alexandria Lodge, Sons of England, was inaugurated last evening by R. W. Bro. Rev. Honson of Vancouver, assisted by Bros. Welsh, Wood and Gilmore of Vancouver and several residents of Victoria formerly connected with the society. A large number of new members were initiated and the following officers elected: President, James Hillier; Past President, S. A Robson; Vice President, Thomas Robinson; Recording Secretary, G. W. R. Lee; Financial Secretary, J. Phillips; Treasurer, C. F. Beavan; Chaplin, Arthur Clarton, Physician, M. S. Wade.

Wellington Strike.

The Wellington mines company, says the Free Press, will pay their hands to-day. It was stated at the last meeting of the Association at Wellington that the owners refused to pay all those who had not taken their tools out of the mines, and the miners concluded to allow them to remain, as they stated, "we shall have a pay coming." Many of the miners have left the district to pay a visit to the old country, and as soon as the mines start again they intend to return. Many of them have obtained employment in the new V. C. Company's mines and it is believed many more will shortly obtain employment in other places.

VICTORIA WEST PARK

REAL ESTATE NOTICE.

Commencing on or before July 1st, we shall place the whole of Block 6 and part of Block 8, on Esquimalt Road, on the market for sale, subdivided into lots.

The greatest portion of this land is one large garden. It faces on Esquimalt Road and West Bay. The Electric Tramway runs in front of the Property. The Esquimalt Water Works will supply water.

The terms of purchase will be such that the smallest capitalist will be able to procure a home within ten minutes' ride of the Postoffice. Electric light will also be supplied by the Tramway Company.

No one is authorized to act as our agents to sell.

BEAUTIFUL WINDOWS.

Several months ago it was mentioned in this paper that three large stained glass windows were to be placed in the front of the new St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, by Mrs. Dunsmuir, in memory of the late Hon. R. Dunsmuir. The windows have just been placed in position, having lately arrived from Frankfort, Germany. They are splendid specimens of the glass stainer's art, and add a great deal to the appearance of the church, both from the interior and exterior point of view. The three windows, one a rose and the other two oblong, with trefoil tops, are very large, and the figures in the scenes depicted are lifesize, the coloring is magnificent, and the shading perfect.

The rose window is divided into eight small circles surrounding an inner circle. In each of the outside circles is the picture of an angel singer, eight in all, forming a choir. Each picture has the face of the subject turned toward the center circle, in which St. Andrew's portrait is shown. The spaces left between the circles have been filled with ornamental flower work, and the whole window is rich in coloring.

The lower left hand window, looking from the pulpit, shows a biblical scene, the announcement of the birth of Christ to the shepherds. Here is shown the angel, surrounded with brilliancy, while the shepherds, three in number, are kneeling before him. The bright stars shown in a background of dark sky add materially to the effectiveness of the scene. The right hand window shows the three wise men of the East paying obeisance to the infant Saviour, who is seated in His mother's lap. A halo surrounds the heads of Christ and the Mother, and the expressions on both faces are spiritual and holy. The rich coloring of the wise men's robes gives a brilliant effect to the picture, which is splendid in tinting and design. The trefoils are filled in with floral designs, the whole forming a splendid and beautiful view.

Beneath the pictures, but forming part of the windows, is the following in old English letters: "Sacred to the memory of Robert Dunsmuir; Born August 31, 1825. Died April 12, 1889." The cost of the windows was over $4000. They are the finest on the coast.

Victoria West Park.

Victoria West Park property, which will be put upon the market in a few days, is very desirable for residences—probably no other suburb of the city combines so many advantages. The property is owned by Mr. R. P. Rithet. A site for a residence which could always command an unbroken view of snow-clad mountains, verdure clad hills and the beautiful Straits of San Juan de Fuca is not everywhere obtainable even in Victoria.

In Darkest Africa.

This last and greatest work of the great explorer, H. M. Stanley, will be the only full authentic account of his last three years' expedition in the wilds of Africa. It is Stanley's masterpiece, and without question the most remarkable story of travel, and the most important record of discovery, adventure and unparalleled hardship and heroism ever written. Photographs of all the important discoveries were taken by Mr. Stanley and his staff. They not only verify every new discovery, but serve to illustrate multitudes of curious things better than any words could. In wealth and accuracy of illustrations no previous book of African travel will in anyway compare with the forthcoming one which promises to be in every way worthy of its incomparably interesting subject. Stanley is a veteran explorer, but the results of this latest expedition were a surprise to himself. The civilization of the interior of Africa has been made possible by his achievements. The work will be in two octavo volumes, of over 500 pages each, replete with maps, and amply illustrated from Mr. Stanley's own photographs and sketches. Price and style of binding: Cloth, extra, two volumes, complete, $9; Library, half leather, marbled edges, complete, $10.50; half Morocco, gilt edges, complete, $13; full Morocco, gilt edges, complete, $17.50. It will be sold only by subscription, through authorized agents, to whom exclusive territory will be assigned, and every precaution will be used to protect them therein. J. E. Gill & Co., of Victoria, are appointed the general agents for British Columbia. No agent will be allowed to take orders without having a certificate of agency from the above firm.

SPORTING NOTES.

Brief Resume of Sporting Matters Here and Elsewhere.

NEW YORK, June 20.—That David T. Pulsifer is in earnest in his proposition to match his colt Jenny against J. R. Haggin's Salvator, winner of the "Suburban," is proved by the fact that he has deposited a certified check for $2500 with the Coney Island Jockey Club. Pulsifer's terms are to match for $2500 a side, the association to add $500, with $200 more if the record for one mile and a quarter is beaten. Pulsifer would like to have Banker Belmont enter Raceland, making a sweepstake, and Brighton Beach Association stands ready to add $1000 if the race is run over its track. Haggin left this city for California without noticing Pulsifer's proposition and it looks as if he had no desire to make a match.

Floods in New South Wales.

No one can read the accounts of the disasters caused by floods throughout Central Australia without experiencing a deep feeling of regret. Over a large area of the river frontages the country has been taken up by selectors, and as almost the whole of this country is now under water it follows as a matter of course that the selectors have lost nearly all their stock. On the large squatting properties the losses of sheep have been very heavy, and it is not unlikely that the death from drowning and starvation will have a considerable influence on the price of stock during the ensuing season. That a river should rise forty feet in the country would be provocative of disaster and loss, but in such a flat country as that through which the northern rivers run it is doubly disastrous. Some of these rivers are now in places over thirty miles wide, and the worst has not come yet. Many of the towns of this flat country are threatened with destruction, notwithstanding the strenuous efforts of the inhabitants to dam out the flood. One of the most unpleasant incidents connected with this widespread inundation is the strike of the workmen employed on the Bourke embankments for higher pay, and this, too, at a time when every moment was of the greatest value. Had the employers of these men been making a profit out of their labor no one would blame them for asking for a larger share of that profit, but the work was an attempt to save the town from destruction, and it is doubted by those capable of giving an opinion that the work will prove successful after all.—Australasian.

True Alaskan Cod.

Early in May, when the last of the winter ice is just disappearing from the rocky shores, the first seal appears. It is always an old male.

The first old male that tumbles awkwardly ashore on St. Paul's or St. George's Island will probably weigh 500 pounds. It will have the muzzle and jaws of a full-blooded Newfoundland dog, except that its lips will be firmly drawn. Its mustache will be of yellowish white and grey hairs, and long enough to sweep over its shoulders if it has not been worn out in some of its fights of previous years.

A great thick mantle of fat will envelope its whole body, quivering like jelly with every movement. It is upon this fat that it will live for the next two months, for until the breeding season is over, it will never leave the spot upon which it settles unless forced away. It has forefeet which are like flabby hands eight or ten inches broad, and hind feet that resemble in construction human feet drawn out to a length of twenty inches, with the instep flattened down and the toes run out into thin membranes. Standing up, resting on its forefeet, its head is three feet above the ground, and it is an impressive and ferocious-looking animal, especially if scarred all over, as is frequently the case, with marks of battle. It will never leave its place to attack anyone, however, and may be approached with safety.

The Cronin Murder.

It is reported that John Kunze, the little German suspect, is assisting the District Attorney to unravel the famous Cronin mystery. It is also reported that O'Sullivan, the ice man, will be pardoned. He is declared to have made a clean breast of the conspiracy, at the urgent pleading of his former prison mate and in consequence of certain facts which have come to Kunze's knowledge since his acquittal.

One day Kunze entered a saloon where an ardent Clan-na-Gael man happened to be. He had been drinking heavily, and no sooner did he catch sight of the little German than he greeted him with effusive warmth. He flung his arms around Kunze's neck and kissed him, at the same time declaring that he was the greatest little man in the world.

Another drink or two loosened his tongue still more, and believing Kunze to be as deep in the plot as he was himself, he drew the German to one side and began talking over the case and the details which the police had either never discovered or at any rate had never put in the possession of the State Attorney. Names were mentioned, and among them the names of the men who drove the doctor to his death and afterwards drove the body away from the Carlson cottage. Moreover, the present whereabouts of that man was given as Chicago, as well as the details of the wagon and method used in driving away the body. The wagon used belongs to an undertaker, and the state has already taken possession of it. Every day last week Kunze reported at the State Attorney's office, and three separate trips were made by him to Joliet, where it is said, armed with his new information, he prevailed on O'Sullivan to tell all he knew about the plot and its execution.
